

Robin du Plessis is a painter, photographer and surface designer. Her work deals with transcendence and the natural world, and covers a variety of genres and materials. She received a BFA from the Rhode Island School of Design, followed by a circuitous career path that has included fabric development, artifact and medical illustration, costume design and boat building, all of which have informed and directed her work. She lives and works in Sag Harbor, New York.